Purpose and Audience

The main purpose of the content is to teach, inform, and connect with people. First, it should help people learn more about health care and how to take care of their health in their community. Second, it should give donors and volunteers important updates about events, the difference they're making, and the impact of their support. Third, the content should help everyone feel connected by sharing real stories, health tips, and events. This helps build trust and encourages more people to get involved.

To connect with donors, use platforms like Facebook and YouTube. These are great for posting longer videos and updates that show how donations are helping. You can also share stories from people who have benefited and talk about how fundraising events have helped the community.

For volunteers, focus on fun, positive, and encouraging content. Instagram and TikTok are the best platforms for this. Show how volunteers are making a difference and let people know how simple it is to join in and help out.

When reaching people who use the services, like individuals or families who benefit from health programs, keep things easy to understand. Again, Instagram and TikTok work well here. Share short, helpful posts like health tips, infographics, or guides to your programs. Try to include real photos or videos of people using the services so others can see the real-life impact.

Tone and voice

When writing or speaking for different groups, it's important to match the tone to who you're talking to and what you're trying to achieve. For example, if you're creating something for the people who benefit from your services, the tone should be caring, helpful, and focused on the community. These messages should make people feel supported and understood.

When you're communicating with donors, the tone should be professional but also sincere. You want to show that you're trustworthy and truly care about the cause. This helps build strong connections and makes people feel confident in giving their support. If you're talking to volunteers, the tone should be uplifting and encouraging. You want to inspire them to get involved and make them feel like they're part of a team that's doing something meaningful together.

The voice you use in all communications should always be the same in a few keyways. It should be empathetic, showing real care for people's stories and experiences. It should also be empowering, giving people clear ways to act, like saying "Join us in making a difference." Lastly, it should be honest. That means avoiding cold or general words like "this population," and instead talking about people as individuals with respect. To keep everything connected and consistent, always include the phrase "Together Towards Health" in every message or piece of content. This helps everyone recognize the brand and what it stands for.

Content Guidelines

To keep things organized and engaging, different types of content should be posted on certain days each week. On Mondays, share a community story, like an article or social media post about someone's experience. Wednesdays are for health tips, which could be in the form of a blog or an infographic. On Fridays, highlight the work of volunteers using videos or short clips. Each month should also have a special theme to focus on an important health topic or campaign.

When writing introductions, start with something that grabs attention; this could be a quote, a question, or a surprising statistic that relates to the topic. Don't forget to include the brand tagline, "Together Towards Health," to help people remember who you are. At the end of each post or video, include a call to action, like asking people to volunteer, donate, or learn more. You should also give clear contact info or links, so it's easy for people to stay involved.

For all content, use the main tagline "Together Towards Health" on every platform to keep the messaging consistent. You can also use additional slogans for special campaigns, like "Your Health". Your Voice. Our Mission." These extra phrases help connect with different groups of people in a more personal way.

When posting online, make sure to use keywords like healthcare, community, volunteer, support, diversity, compassion, and local health to help more people find your content. You should also use hashtags such as #PeakVista, #CommunityCare, #VolunteerSpotlight, #HealthTips, and #TogetherTowardsHealth to increase visibility and connect with others who care about the same topics.

Platform-Specific Best Practices

Different social media platforms work best with different styles of content, so it's important to know what to post where and know the technical guidelines.

Each platform also has its own recommended image sizes:

- Instagram: Use 1080x1080 pixels for square images and 1080x1350 pixels for portrait images.
- Facebook: Use 1200x630 pixels for the best quality.
- YouTube thumbnails: Should be 1280x720 pixels to look sharp.
- For video lengths:
- TikTok videos should stay under 60 seconds.
- YouTube videos should be 3–5 minutes for storytelling and 1–2 minutes for shorter updates.

Following these best practices helps your content look great and connect better with your audience on each platform.

For Instagram, try to post often about once or twice a day. Use carousel posts to share event photos or tell a story with multiple images. In the captions, always include a call to action, like "Click the link in our bio to learn more."

On Facebook, the audience is usually older, including donors. You can post longer updates here, along with stories about donors and links to fundraising campaigns. The tone should be a little more formal than Instagram, but still friendly and clear.

For YouTube, post videos that are 3 to 5 minutes long and give people a deeper look into your programs. Keep your posting schedule regular, something like twice a month is ideal. Always include closed captions and detailed video descriptions to make the content more accessible for everyone.

On TikTok, keep your videos short, under 60 seconds. Focus on fun and helpful content like health tips, volunteer shout-outs, or community outreach clips. Start every video with the “Together Towards Health” tagline. Use catchy music and quick editing to keep younger viewers interested.

Engagement and interaction

Peak Vista Community Health Centers (Peak Vista) provides exceptional healthcare services to individuals and families facing access barriers while promoting respect. The organization’s mission emphasizes patient-centered care, compassion, and responsible stewardship of resources. Peak Vista strives to create an inclusive community where every individual can access the care, they need with dignity.

The brand's voice should be compassionate and informative, embodying professionalism while maintaining an approachable tone. All communications must ensure clarity, avoid overly technical jargon, and address health topics without making light of them. Through storytelling, education, and community engagement, content should resonate with the audience and highlight the real impact of the services provided.

On social media, each platform requires a unique approach tailored to its audience. Facebook should focus on community engagement and program updates, while Instagram is best for showcasing vibrant visuals that tell patients’ stories. X (formerly Twitter) serves as a platform for quick news updates, and LinkedIn should emphasize professional networking and organizational achievements. TikTok and YouTube shorts will create brief, engaging, and educational content that appeals to a younger audience.

Engagement with the community is essential for Peak Vista. Timely responses to inquiries and comments on social media build trust and show compassion for the audience by actively listening to their inputs.

Peak Vista should invite its audience to participate through interactive content. This content could be polls, live Q&As, and surveys, encourages followers to share their thoughts and experiences. For instance, social media posts could gather their audience’s suggestions for community programs.

Social Media Guidelines for a More Consistent Look and Feel

Peak Vista should always have the same short intro and outro instrumental music in their videos, lasting no longer than eight seconds for each. Everyone should wear blue even if not in their traditional blue uniforms. Any text in videos should be dark blue or black on a white or warm off-white colored background. The font should always be Arial. The size of the font should be 36 bold for titles. For subtitles, it should be a size of 14 bold. Regular text should be at a size of 12. The light blue for the font and trim of the documents should be hex code: 034662.

Imagery should remain positive. This means no crying in videos unless they are tears of joy. It also means no saying things like, “I hate my job” or “I really did not want to treat that patient.” People in the videos should sound enthusiastic but never silly or with a condescending tone. There should never be sarcasm or rolling of the eyes in any video. These videos should never have intense music or images of blood or gore. That means never showing people in pain or showing open wounds or surgeries.

Children’s educational videos will always have the same light blue background and narrator. These will always be cartoons that take less than 5 minutes to watch. The video will always open with a short question “have you ever wondered” These educational children’s videos will be on TikTok and YouTube shorts. A hashtag for these educational children’s videos will be hashtag stay curious, hashtag for kids, and hashtag health science. No dramatic or intense background music will be played.

Guidelines For Overall Consistency and Branding

Peak Vista should plan on posting at least 3-5 times a week across primary platforms like Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter. Share educational content on health topics, community events, and organizational updates at least once a week. Highlight patient success stories or testimonials bi-weekly to build community trust. Create interactive posts such as polls or questions weekly to boost engagement.

Peak Vista will share relevant articles, infographics, and health tips. Announce events at least one month in advance, providing reminders as the date approaches. Recognize volunteers and staff contributions monthly to foster community and employee engagement.

Peak Vista should use specific hashtags like #PeakVista, #CommunityHealth, and #AccessToCare for visibility. They should also tag collaborating with organizations or partners in posts to encourage cross-promotion and community building.

Guidelines For Using the Logo

The colored version of the logo will consist of Blue Hex code: 153c5d And white. There will also be a black and white version of the logo and a “fancy” version of the logo, which will be light blue, blue, and grey. Light blue hex code: 034662. The grey will have hex code: a79f92. The fancy logo will be used in all videos including educational videos. The black and white will be used on all printed official documents, and the colored version will be used on all digital websites and official written documents that are not videos.
